

GIVING A CLUE

Pick a player to be the Clue Giver. They shuffle their cards 1-9, pick one at random, and keep it secret.

The Clue Giver now thinks of a clue that fits the theme and the two descriptions. Don't worry about giving a perfect clue, they don't exist!

What counts as a clue? That's up to the group. It's typically one person or thing. A potato. Issac Newton. Goat's cheese pizza. Just don't use a word from the board.

GUESSING

Every other player now needs to work out what on earth they might mean. When you've worked out the Clue Giver's number (or guessed), place the corresponding card face down in front of you.

When all players have chosen, flip the cards and reveal your guesses. The Clue Giver then reveals their number, and you see who was right. Could you follow their logic?

SCORING

In Angry Yellow Fruit, each player that guessed correctly gets a point. The Clue Giver gets a point for each player that got it right.

RESET THE BOARD

Once you've revealed the answer, the clue's two descriptions change. Swap them out for new description cards.

After all players have given a clue for the theme (or you fancy a change), swap out the theme. Draw a new random theme card, and as a group decide which side to use for the next round.

ADDING MORE PLAYERS

The only limit to the number of players is the number of selection cards. If you want to play with more than 6 people, players can hold up a number of fingers 1-9, or write their guesses down on a piece of paper.
